

City candidates tackle revenue question

By Frank Boyett

Henderson voters have plenty of choices Nov. 6 in determining the future of city government. Four of the eight candidates will be elected to the Henderson City Commission. The choices are incumbent Robby Mills, Daniel T. Hancock, incumbent Robert Pruitt, Jesse Johnston IV, Jan Hite, incumbent Alan Taylor, Tom Davis and incumbent Mike Farmer.

The question of city finances came up during last month's controversy about the commission's

■ Eight vying for four seats on commission

WEDNESDAY More on city races adoption of a compensating tax rate, which increased the city's property tax rate by 2.1 cents per $100 valuation. That rate of 54.2 cents per $100 will produce revenue of $5.9 million, up $262,456 from the previous year. That creates a tax bill of $54.20 for each $10,000 worth of assessed value, up about $2 per $10,000 of assessed value because of the increase.

Proponents of the increase advocate small, gradual tax increases to keep pace with inflation. Opponents object to raising taxes after changing employee health insurance benefits, which initially had been estimated to save the city $818,720 annually. More recently, Human Resource Director Connie Galloway presented the city commission with updated estimates showing that instead of costing city employees money, the health plan changes actually have benefited them overall by an estimated $189,888 this year alone.

Some long-standing employees, who earlier gave up salary increases to get the former health plan, have seen declines in benefits, however, and the city's figures also do not reflect some employees paying more because their spouses were required to take other insurance coverage.

Keep in mind that the city's four main sources of General Fund revenue are property taxes, payroll/net profits taxes, insurance taxes and payments in lieu of taxes from city-owned utilities. The commission has final say on any proposed utility rate increases, as well as on any tax increase.

The candidates were posed questions by email and their responses, in the same order candidates will appear on the ballot, were also via email. Their answers, for all intents and purposes, are as they wrote them, although The Gleaner has made minor modifications to conform to newspaper style and to correct any misspellings.

Superstorm roars ashore in N. Jersey; surge huge

■ Millions left without power; threat remains

By Katie Zezima
and Erin McClam
Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Superstorm Sandy slammed into the New Jersey coastline with 80 mph winds Monday night and hurled an unprecedented 13-foot surge of seawater at New York City, threatening its subways and the electrical system that powers Wall Street. At least four deaths were blamed on the storm, and the presidential campaign ground to a halt a week before Election Day.

Sandy knocked out power to at least 3.1 million people, and New York's main utility said large sections of Manhattan had been plunged into darkness by the storm. Water pressed into the island from three sides.

Just before its center reached land, the storm was stripped of hurricane status, but the distinction was purely technical, based on its shape and internal temperature. It still packed hurricane-force wind, and forecasters were careful to say it remained every bit as dangerous to the 50 million people in its path.

As the storm closed in, it smacked the boarded-up big cities of the Northeast corridor — Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston — with stinging rain and gusts of more than 85 mph. It also converged with a cold-weather sys-

'Terrible failures' in protecting Scouts

■ Child predators sometimes stayed, despite policies

By Jenni Bergal
Special correspondent for Scripps investigative team jbergal@gmail.com.

The Boy Scouts of America prides itself on creating a safe environment for its youths. But an investigation into more than two decades of the organization's internal records reveals it failed to stop Scout leader pedophiles from becoming repeat offenders or from re-entering Scouting through a revolving door.

A Scripps news team's examination of 1,881 "ineligible volunteer" files dating from 1970 through 1991 shows that the Boy Scouts were plagued by systemic failures that left its young members at risk for decades.

What top leaders in the Boy Scouts say the organization is doing to tighten the gaps through which predators slip in.

Among the findings:

- At least 101 Scout leaders accused of sexual molestation had faced previous allegations of abusing Scouts, but had not been kicked out of the organization.
- In at least 88 cases, Scout officials failed to conduct adequate background checks and allowed men with criminal convictions, often for child molestation, into Scouting.
- At least 46 men booted from Scouting because of sexual misconduct were later able to return, often by changing troops or moving to another state — a revolving door for predators.

"It sounds like a breakdown at the high-up level," said Victor Vieth, executive director of the Minnesota-based National Child Protection Training Center.

Vieth, a former prosecutor whose center trains child abuse investigators, said organizations such as the Scouts need to be especially vigilant about pedophiles.

"You have to understand the danger. That was the whole point of these files," he said.

In an interview with Scripps, Boy Scouts National President Wayne Perry acknowledged some "terrible failures" in the past when it came to safeguarding Scouts. "It's a failure of judgment. It's a failure of execution.... It's a failure on many levels," he said.

But Perry, a volunteer and

Johnson: Remembered as one of best

When Thelma Banks Johnson entered the world 44 years after the Civil War and three years before the Titanic hit the iceberg, her future didn't look at all promising.

Born to cotton field workers — the fifth of six children — she was poor, female and African American.

In that spring of 1909, white females didn't have a lot of rights, and black females had far fewer.

Her parents kept her in school as long as they could, but at the end of her eighth-grade year, they told her that her education had ended and she would have to labor with them among the rows of cotton.

Many people, no doubt most people, would have surrendered any dreams and resigned themselves to their situation.

But not Thelma, and that's why I not only have long admired this woman who died at age 103 last Friday but also revere her.

Her life is proof that if the heart and the mind want something badly enough, they will get it no matter what the sacrifice.

Imagine the courage it took a few years later to leave her Florida family and board a train that would carry her to Savannah and a period in which

TAKE NOTE

Get ready to fall back

Daylight-saving time will end this Sunday, which means you'll need to "fall back" by setting your clocks back one hour before going to bed Saturday night. Many computers and cellphones will do this automatically, provided the latest software updates have been installed. But to be safe, be sure to rely on a traditional clock that has been accurately reset on Saturday night. Since a change in federal law in 2007, daylight-saving time begins at 2 a.m. on the second Sunday of March and ends at 2 a.m. on the first Sunday of November.

Start of rural electricity hailed by speakers

By Chuck Stinnett
cstinnett@thegleaner.com
270-831-8343

One of the guests was a man who, at more than 90 years old, remembers life before electricity came to the countryside. Another was the chief of a 500-employee aluminum smelter for which electric power is the lifeblood of the operation.

The presence of both Ivan Russell of Poole in Webster County and Serge Gosselin, who is general manager of Rio Tino Alcan's Sebree Works, at an anniversary ceremony demonstrated the wide impact that the Kenergy Corp. rural electric co-op has had over three quarters of a century.

On Monday, Kenergy celebrated the 75th anniversary of when one of its predecessors, the Henderson County Rural Electrification Association, brought power to Frank T. Street's Cardinal Farms on U.S. 41-Alternate south of Henderson, making him the first rural electric co-op customer in Kentucky.

"This is the birthplace of electric service in rural Kentucky," Kenergy President and CEO Greg Starheim said during a ceremony Monday afternoon. "When it comes to the electrification of rural Kentucky, you're standing on hallowed ground."

Glenn English

"The farmers who founded this co-op never dreamed it would serve all or part of 14 Western Kentucky counties with 7,000 miles of power lines and 55,000 members, and that it would be the nation's leading co-op in terms of annual power sales" thanks largely to the Alcan and Century Aluminum smelters.

Bringing electricity to rural Kentucky starting in 1937 had a profound impact on people's lives, co-op officials said.

"It was not just about turning the power on. It was about turning people on," said Bill Corum, president and CEO of the Kentucky Association of Electric Cooperatives in Louisville.

"It was truly haves and have-nots in those days," Glenn English, CEO of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association in Washington, D.C., said.

"It was rural vs. urban, and the difference was most telling in regard to women," English said. In the 1930s, rural women labored without the benefit of washing machines, refrigerators, electric water heaters, electric furnaces and other modern devices.

"The life expectancy of rural women was a full five years less than their urban counterparts," he said. "They were difficult times, and it was the drudgery of caring for their families that shortened their life spans."

"These people could not find anyone else to supply them with electric power," English said of Depression-era farm families. "They had to do it themselves. Bringing electricity to rural America was the greatest do-it-yourself project in the nation's history," made possible through financing from the federal Rural Electrification Administration to pay for setting poles and stringing wire across the countryside.

"It was the greatest partnership between government and the people that this country has ever seen," he declared.

Board approves $60,000 for farmers market

Gleaner staff

The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board has approved Henderson Fiscal Court for $25,000 in state and $35,000 in Henderson County Agricultural Development Funds for construction of a new Henderson Farmers Market building at the Henderson County Fairgrounds.

The goal of the project is to expand the market through additional vendors and increase new consumer participation.

The 40-by-144-foot open-air facility will allow up to 24 vendors to sell at the market.

Farmers with locally grown and produced products from Henderson, Union, Webster and Daviess counties are eligible to become market members. Currently, there are 14 registered vendors with the farmers market.

"I am committed to creating opportunities that will provide markets for Kentucky producers and access to locally grown foods to Kentuckians," Gov. Steve Beshear, who chairs the board, said in a statement. "Projects funded by the Kentucky Agricultural Development Board, such as this one, play an integral role in achieving this goal."

"I am pleased to see Ag Development Funds helping to finance local farmers markets as an outlet for farmers to sell their produce at a fair price," state Sen. Dorsey Ridley of Henderson said in a statement.

"This will really help our farmers market, which will in turn make it easier for more customers and farmers alike to take advantage of our locally grown products," said Rep. David Watkins of Henderson.

Afghans employed by United States getting raw deal

American reporters who cover the Mideast say that after covering the most virulent anti-U.S. demonstrations — complete with the burning of effigies of Uncle Sam and the Stars and Stripes and impassioned calls for Allah to destroy our country — they are quietly drawn aside, often by the most strident demonstrators, and implored:

“I want to go to America. Can you help me get to the United States?”

Despite all of our missteps overseas, to most of the world we are still a shining city on a hill and, in that trite but true phrase, the land of opportunity.

The prospect of eventual resettlement in the United States caused thousands of educated, capable, English-speaking Iraqis to go to work for U.S. forces as interpreters, fixers, guides and advisers, at great risk to themselves and their families.

Despite extravagant promises and congressional pressures, only handfuls were admitted and then at a glacial pace. The “streamlined” bureaucratic hoops are at iraq.usembassy.gov.

Now we have a similar situation in Afghanistan, and our Afghan employees, especially those involved in military operations, are terrified at the fate awaiting them and their families when the U.S. pulls out altogether by the end of 2014. Like the Iraqi insurgents, the Taliban has discovered that killing a man’s family is a great disincentive to working with the Americans.

On paper, the safety of those who worked with us will be in the hands of the Afghan security forces. Not surprisingly, the pro-U.S. Afghans do not find this at all reassuring.

Americans should find it infuriating; certainly our troops who have served over there do. In 2009, Congress approved 7,500 visas for Afghans employed by the U.S. government; 5,700 have navigated the bureaucratic maze to apply, a number that will surely swell as the withdrawal date nears. So far, the State Department told The Washington Post, just 32 have been approved.

There is a word for this: disgraceful.

If State can’t do it, let the U.S. military, no model of bureaucratic speed itself, do it; at least the job will get done. This truly is a matter of national security because, although we devoutly wish it were otherwise, this is not the last war we will fight in a land with an unfamiliar language and culture where success depends on the cooperation of the locals.

Abortion stance hurting GOP chances

Just when you think the national political scene can’t get any worse, Murphy’s law takes over. Republican hopes of taking control of the U.S. Senate depended to a large degree on winning in Missouri and holding on to seats in safe states like Indiana, where the esteemed and worldly incumbent, Richard Lugar, was considered a sure bet for another term despite his elevated age of 80.

Now as we all know, in both those states, revelations about Republican nominees’ controversial stances on abortion have set back GOP aspirations dramatically. The House most assuredly will remain in Republicans’ hands, and the Senate will be a much better bet to stay with the Democrats. Whoever wins the White House next week probably faces the same divided Congress of the past two years.

What this portends is continued deadlock over tax reform, economic revitalization, immigration and the lowering of the national debt. The best-case scenario would be for those on Capitol Hill to understand that national security — actually, survival — depends on compromise on these crucial issues; that their responsibility has nothing to do with trying to tell the rest of us how we should conduct and shape our personal lives to fit their standards. But don’t count on that.

DAN THOMASSON

Voters do strange things, particularly in primaries where extremists on social issues have placed their own rigid ideals above the nation’s welfare, making such things as contraception and a woman’s right to control her own reproductive system, and issues like same sex marriage their first priority.

In Missouri, the GOP senatorial nominee, Rep. Todd Akin, who had a good chance of defeating the Democratic incumbent, Claire McCaskill, startled even his Republican handlers by announcing that women who are raped can’t get pregnant because their bodies automatically prevent it. The comment has been roundly debunked by intelligent human beings for months now. Akin continues to run despite being cut off from mainstream GOP money and the support of senior GOP officials who once were willing to overlook his extremism for a shot at winning the Senate.

One would think this would have suppressed others’ impulses to make similar ridiculous claims — at least out loud.

That wasn’t the case. At a time when his party’s presidential candidate is beginning to close the gap between him and Barack Obama among women voters, the Republican candidate in Indiana, an unequivocal foe of abortion and an extreme conservative on other issues, announced to the world that God wanted women who are impregnated as a result of rape to keep the baby. Richard Mourdock is proudly unapologetic for his position, unwilling to concede there is any circumstance in which abortion is permissible.

Mourdock’s positions may have God’s stamp of approval, but we will never know; as far as anyone can discern, he is the only person running for Congress who seems to claim direct communication with the Almighty. But if the Lord he cites demands that an innocent victim of a heinous crime should be forced to keep a baby who has the genes of the monster who raped her, it is not the same merciful God I was taught to believe in.

It might be appropriate to ask what Mourdock’s position would be if one of his loved ones were so assaulted and faced the prospect of an unwanted offspring with the DNA of her assailant and the daily reminder of the horrifying deal.

This is what comes when voters decide they have had enough of a decent, distinguished officeholder with a sterling record of putting statesmanship above partisanship when necessary. Indiana Republicans must face up to the fact that, by replacing enlightenment with a candidate who seems firmly rooted in the Dark Ages, they probably have helped deprive their party of controlling both houses of Congress. As a proud Hoosier, I am appalled.

Denying climate change will cost

By John M. Crisp
Scripps Howard News Service

I think that sportscaster Bob Costas pretty much got it right. He was on comedian Bill Maher’s “Real Time” a few weeks ago, and the subject turned to the concussion crisis in the National Football League. A number of retired football players are suing the league for an alleged failure to protect them from the long-term consequences of the repeated blows to the head that professional players accumulate by the many thousands.

The NFL and colleges have made belated and half-hearted efforts to deal with the issue. But ultimately, Costas said, not much is going to change because, well, the fans just don’t care.

Weigh an autumn without football against the damage to the brains of young players — which is mostly out of sight, anyway — and football will win every time. The game is just too exciting to abandon or to allow for remedies that might diminish the violence in any significant way. It’s not that fans are choosing football over the health of the players; rather, they’re conveniently ignoring the fact that there’s any choice to be made at all.

But this column isn’t about concussions. Our attitude toward the carnage in football exemplifies our enormous capacity for denial in the face of unpleasant realities.

Consider our American way of life, the result of a fortuitous confluence of abundant resources, enlightened ingenuity and human energy. For many of us, it’s the most pleasant, satisfying, comfortable and amusing existence that civilization — anywhere or anytime — has been able to produce. Our self-satisfaction and complacency have given rise to a remarkable politics of denial, which is being played out tellingly in the current presidential campaign.

In the final presidential debate, the candidates were asked about the greatest threat that America faces. President Barack Obama referred to the threat from Islamic jihadists. Gov. Mitt Romney said our greatest threat is a nuclear-armed Iran. I’m not the first to point out that the threat of climate change was unmentioned in any of the presidential debates and virtually absent from the campaign.

Allow me to assert the short version of the proposition that virtually all serious climate scientists support, that the greenhouse gases that are being increasingly pumped into our atmosphere are pushing our warming earth toward, at best, extreme discomfort and, at worst, catastrophe. At present, almost nothing is being done in response.

The Republicans accommodate the full-blown climate-change deniers, who believe, despite the science, that the earth is undergoing ordinary, benign temperature fluctuations. Or if the earth really is getting hotter, humanity has nothing to do with it. Or if humanity is responsible, there’s nothing that can be done about it anyway. Romney’s position on this issue, as with many others, has evolved away from pure denial, but nothing indicates that he takes climate change very seriously.

The Democrats, on the other hand, perform somewhat better on this issue. They express more interest in green energy and automobile mileage standards. But the fact is, these are half-measures, and neither party can afford to say much about climate change because the solutions — if there are any — will be painful, difficult and expensive. The pleasures, comforts and amusements of modern life depend on the extensive use of hydrocarbons, and no one is looking very seriously at finding ways to wean ourselves away from them.

So we’ve driven both parties into a politics of denial. Our way of life — let’s call it the “Hydrocarbon Bubble” — is so good that it prevents us from even considering an existence without the comforts and amusements that we currently enjoy in abundance.

And the result? Bob Dylan said that a hard rain’s a-gonna fall, but Bob Costas said that the game is so much fun that most of us just don’t care.

Marriage for gays uneasy senior topic

■ Age group a priority for both sides

By Patrick Condon
Associated Press

SHOREVIEW, Minn. — The word “homosexual” was rarely uttered in public when Louise Pardee was growing up, but now the 81-year-old is dialing up fellow Minnesota seniors trying to convince them gay relationships are nothing to fear.

“Often I find myself saying, ‘I know this isn’t an easy thing to talk about,’” Pardee said, between calls at a phone bank in suburban St. Paul set up to fight a proposed constitutional ban on gay marriage.

Minnesota is one of four states with gay marriage on the November ballot, and gay rights supporters hope this is the year they finally get a win after defeats in 32 previous state votes on the definition of marriage. They are encouraged by national polls showing increasing acceptance of same-sex marriage by younger generations.

But the outcome may depend on winning over some seniors, who vote in high numbers and have been a key factor in the decisions in the other states, including socially liberal ones like California.

“We’ve always been able to count on people over 65 voting our way in higher numbers than any other age group,” said Frank Schubert, the political strategist leading the campaigns against gay marriage in Minnesota, Maine, Maryland and Washington state. He expects the same this year. Recent polls have showed a tight race on Minnesota’s gay marriage question.

Reaching seniors is a priority for campaigns on both sides of the issue, as they employ elaborate voter outreach operations to both motivate their natural supporters and reach demographic groups that might be persuadable. In Minnesota, people older than 65 represent 13 percent of the population, about average compared with other states, and reliably post the best voter turnout percentages of any age group.

Gay rights organizations have recruited dozens of senior volunteers and given them lists of names culled from voter registration lists. The callers are trained, including by going through role-playing exercises to help them talk to older voters about a concept that was largely unthinkable for most of their lives.

The conversations can be awkward, says Pardee, but not impossible.

“People think it sounds hard to convince seniors on this subject, because we grew up with the taboos. But we’re a group that’s more open to arguments about fairness and justice,” said Pardee, a widow and grandmother who once worked in public relations.

gious concerns most often. The volunteers’ script suggests this response: “I’m a person of faith. One of the values important to me is to treat people the way I would want to be treated. This amendment is hurtful to so many people, which is why I’m voting no. What do you think about that?”

These volunteers are also encouraged to improvise. They bring up their children and grandchildren, gay people they’ve known, how their own faith informs their support for gay couples.

Minnesotans United for All Families, the lead group fighting the amendment, has also mounted phone banks micro-targeting other demographic slices: blacks calling blacks, Hispanics calling Hispanics and so forth. Campaign spokeswoman Kate Brickman said the group has reached at least 500,000 people through phone banks and other outreach efforts.

Minnesota for Marriage, the chief group seeking to ban gay marriage, is not tailoring its phone bank efforts to deliver a specialized message to specific demographic groups. The state campaign, said Schubert, emphasizes the idea that making gay marriage socially acceptable would make it easier for young people to embrace a gay lifestyle.

The group, which is receiving substantial funding from Catholic organizations, is using alliances with thousands of churches and religious groups to help them reach seniors, in addition to other churchgoers. Seniors attend church in higher numbers than younger age groups.

“The beauty of our campaign is it’s a universal message, that children need a mother and a father and that they best thrive in a home where both those parents are there and loving them,” said Winnie Okafor, outreach coordinator for Minnesota for Marriage.

Several visitors to a seniors activity center in downtown Minneapolis said they can’t reconcile gay marriage with their religious views.

“I believe in one man and one woman,” said Art Posingies, 82. “I’m a Christian, I go to church. If it’s in the Bible, I believe it and that settles it.”

Joe Nyquist, an 83-year-old retired doctor who is making calls for the pro-gay marriage group, said he’s encountered many older men who don’t want to talk about gay people at all.

He said he was motivated to volunteer by his own gay son, a 58-year-old who’s been with his partner for 18 years.

Crime reported to police fell in ’11

■ FBI says it’s the fifth year of declines

By Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The number of violent crimes reported to police decreased 3.8 percent last year to 1.2 million, the fifth straight year of declines, the FBI announced Monday.

Meanwhile, the total number of property crimes reported to law enforcement agencies went down by 0.5 percent to 9 million, the ninth consecutive year that figure has fallen. Property crimes resulted in estimated losses of $156.6 billion.

The latest declines mark the continuation of a nearly two-decade drop in crime levels, a trend that almost no one in the field of criminology predicted, said Professor John Caulkins of Carnegie Mellon Heinz College. The trend, said Caulkins, is a reflection of a range of many factors, including policing practices.

A drop in the number of people in the peak crime-age category of teens to 25-year-olds also contributed to the crime reductions, Caulkins said, but added that “if this were only a story of demographics, we would never have had this kind of substantial decline.”

Government figures released two weeks ago said that violent crime has fallen by 65 percent since 1993.

Twenty years ago, “there was a lot of hand-wringing about high crime levels” but “we’re way past the possibility that this is a lucky conversion,” Caulkins said.

The FBI’s data showed that the South accounted for 41.3 percent of violent crime, while the West accounted for 22.9 percent. The Midwest claimed 19.5 percent of the cases and the Northeast, 16.2 percent.

Murders, rapes, robberies and aggravated assaults reported to authorities all declined last year. According to the FBI’s data for last year:

■ 14,612 people were killed, down 14.7 percent from 17,128 in 2007.

■ 83,425 people were raped, down 9.4 percent from 92,160 in 2007.

■ 354,396 people were robbed, down over 20 percent from 447,324 in 2007.

■ 751,131 people were assaulted, down 13.3 percent from 866,358 in 2007.

The FBI said firearms were used in two-thirds of the nation’s killings last year, and in two out of every five robberies and in one out of five aggravated assaults.

In 2011, authorities solved nearly 64 percent of killings, over 40 percent of forcible rapes, nearly 29 percent of robberies and nearly 57 percent of aggravated assaults.

The FBI’s crime reporting program, which captures crimes that are reported to police, is one of two statistical measures of crime levels issued by the Justice Department. Historically, less than half of all crimes, including violent crimes, are reported to police.

The other measure, the national crime victimization survey, is designed to capture crime data whether it is reported to police or not. That survey is based on interviews of crime victims. Two weeks ago, the victimization survey reported that violent crimes jumped 18 percent last year, the first rise in nearly 20 years, while property crimes rose for the first time in a decade.

TEHRAN — Iran has images of sensitive Israeli military bases taken by a drone that was launched by Lebanon’s Hezbollah movement and downed by Israel earlier this month, a senior Iranian lawmaker claimed Monday in the latest boast from Tehran about purported advances in the capabilities of its unmanned aircraft.

The announcement gave no details about the photos, but it suggested Iranian drones have the ability to transmit data while in flight. It also appeared aimed at warning Israel about the options for retaliation for any possible strikes on Iranian nuclear sites.

U.S. seeks help in possible Mali move

ALGEIRS — U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton sought Algeria’s assistance Monday for any future military intervention in Mali, pressing the North African nation to provide intelligence — if not boots on the ground — to help rout the al-Qaida-linked militants across its southern border.

Clinton, on the first stop of a five-day trip overseas, met with Algerian President Abdelaziz Bouteflika as the United States and its allies ramped up preparations to fight northern Mali’s breakaway Islamist republic.

When Mali’s democratically elected leader was ousted in a military coup in March, Tuareg rebels seized on the power vacuum and within weeks took control of the north, aided by an Islamist faction. The Islamists then quickly ousted the Tuaregs and took control of half the country.

Observers critical of bias before election

KIEV — Ukraine’s parliamentary election was marked by an uneven playing field and biased media coverage that reversed many democratic gains the country had made, international observers said Monday.

With Ukraine’s top opposition leader, Yulia Tymoshenko, in jail, President Viktor Yanukovich’s Party of Regions was poised to retain its control of parliament after Sunday’s vote, according to preliminary results.

Tymoshenko’s party and two other opposition groups, however, were planning to join forces to challenge Yanukovich’s strong grip on power.

Observers from the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe criticized Ukraine for rolling back on democratic freedoms in the vote.

SITTWE — Survivors of ethnic clashes in western Myanmar lashed out at the government Monday for failing to prevent violence between Muslims and Buddhists.

The latest violence between ethnic Rakhine Buddhists and Rohingya Muslims began Oct. 21 and has left at least 84 people dead and 129 injured, according to the government. Human rights groups believe the true toll could be far higher. “The authorities are not solving the problem and soldiers are not defending us,” said Kyaw Myint, a Muslim man who took refuge at Thechaung camp outside Sittwe. He fled his home in nearby Pauktaw when it was torched Wednesday.

Syria boosts number of airstrikes on rebels

■ Death toll up amid four-day cease-fire

By Bassem Mroue
Associated Press

BEIRUT — Syrian fighter jets pounded rebel areas across the country Monday with scores of airstrikes that anti-regime activists called the most widespread bombing in a day since Syria’s troubles started 19 months ago.

The death toll for what was supposed to be a four-day cease-fire between the regime of President Bashar Assad and rebels seeking his overthrow exceeded 500, and activists guessed the government’s heavy reliance on air power reflected its inability to roll back rebel gains.

“The army is no longer able to make any progress on the ground so it is resorting to this style,” said activist Hisham Nijim via Skype from the northern town of Khan Sheikhoun.

Activists said more than 80 people were killed nationwide Monday, while videos online showed fighter jets screaming over Syrian towns, mushroom clouds rising from neighborhoods and residents searching the remains of damaged and collapsed buildings for bodies.

The airstrikes focused on rebel areas in the northern provinces of Aleppo and Idlib, as well as on restive areas in and around Damascus, the capital. The regime has been bombing rebel areas in the north for months, but had used its air force sparingly near the capital, presumably to avoid isolating its supporters there.

But analysts say that rampant defections and rising rebel capabilities have lessened the regime’s ability to take back and hold rebel areas, making airstrikes its most effective way to fight back.

Monday was supposed to be the fourth and final day of an internationally sanctioned cease-fire to coincide with the Muslim holiday of Eid al-Adha, one of the holiest periods of the Muslim calendar.

But violence marred the truce almost immediately after it was to go into effect Friday and continued through the weekend.

A car bomb exploded Monday in the Damascus suburb of Jarmana, knocking balconies off residential buildings and sending firefighters rushing to fight the blaze, according to TV footage. The state news agency SANA said 11 people were killed and 67 wounded.

China crowd wins in protest

■ Thousands boo chemical plant’s plans

By Gillian Wong
Associated Press

NINGBO, China — A victory by protesters against the expansion of a chemical plant proves the new rule in China: The authoritarian government is scared of middle-class rebellion and will give in if the demonstrators’ aims are limited and not openly political.

It’s far from a revolution. China’s nascent middle class, the product of the past decade’s economic boom, is looking for better government, not a different one. They’re especially concerned about issues like health, education and property values and often resist the growth-at-all-costs model Beijing has pushed.

The past week’s chemical-plant protests reached an unruly crescendo over the weekend, when thousands of people marched through prosperous Ningbo city, clashing with police at times. The city government gave in Sunday and agreed to halt the plant’s expansion.

Even so, the protesters did not back down, staying outside city government offices hours after the concession. About 200 protesters, many of them retirees, returned Monday to make sure the government keeps its word on the oil and ethylene refinery run by a subsidiary of Sinopec, the state-owned petrochemical giant.

TRAIL OF BETRAYAL

retired Washington state businessman, noted that the confidential files kept out many predators and “protected a lot of kids.” He said the Boy Scouts continue to keep such files as part of a “multilayered approach” to child protection, which includes mandatory reporting of suspected child abuse to authorities.

“No organization has done more to try to help understand the child-abuse situation than the Boy Scouts of America,” Perry said.

Many child-protection experts, including Vieth, say that during the last few decades, the Scout organization has been out front in establishing strict policies to protect children against predators, including barring adults from one-on-one activities with youths and requiring criminal background checks.

But many of those rules didn’t exist in the 1970s and 1980s. And even those policies that were in place — such as the decades-old requirement to put the names of “ineligible volunteers” into the confidential files and cross-reference them with any adult who tried to register — weren’t always followed.

Take the case of Indianapolis Scout leader Thomas Hacker. In 1961 the schoolteacher, then in his mid-20s, was arrested on an assault and battery charge involving Scouts at a campout. A judge dismissed the case. A local Scout executive later wrote that Hacker was removed as a scoutmaster, but that a prominent board member had called to say “that Tom was a fine young man, and asked that he not be placed on our ‘red flag’ list.” Lacking “concrete evidence ... we did not do this, for which I have had many hours of regret.”

Hacker joined two other troops before being arrested in 1970 for molesting 51 boys, most of them pupils at his school. He pleaded guilty to one count of assault and battery and was given a suspended sentence.

Hacker was barred from Scouting, and his name was put in the Scouts’ confidential files. But in 1971, using a fake name, Hacker turned up as a scoutmaster in the Chicago suburbs. Later that year he was arrested for taking indecent liberties with a child.

When the local Scout council discovered who Hacker really was, they notified the national organization, which again suspended him. “Under no circumstances do we want this man registered in Scouting,” the national registration director wrote back.

But by the mid-1980s, Hacker had become a scoutmaster of a Catholic Church-sponsored troop in the Chicago area. He resigned abruptly in October 1987, citing a work promotion and “some personal family situations.”

Five months later, Hacker was indicted on charges of sexually abusing a dozen boys, most of them Scouts. A jury convicted him on two counts of aggravated criminal sexual assault and sentenced him to two consecutive 50-year prison terms. Now 76, he’s incarcerated at Big Muddy River Correctional Center in Ina, Ill.

Scout records show how Hacker beat the system: He claimed to have been registered in more than one troop, at a time when Scout officials didn’t check multiple registrations. When he re-registered, they didn’t review the confidential file. And he changed his name or middle initial to avoid detection.

Burbank, Ill., Police Capt. Joe Ford, a detective at the time of Hacker’s arrest, said he and his colleagues were shocked at how he had managed to stay in Scouting all those years.

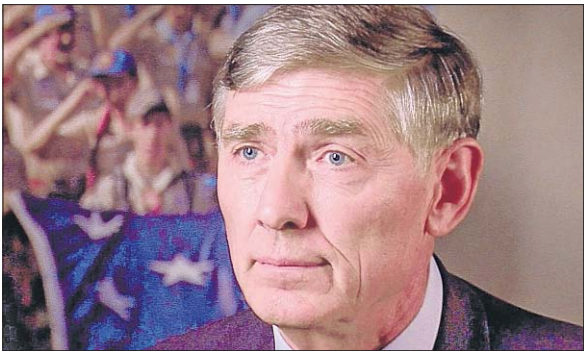

“How could that happen with the Boy Scouts?” Ford said. “You would think a national organization has a national list. Somebody dropped the ball somewhere. ... There was a failure of the system, without a doubt.”

The failure to police their own was a common theme that ran through the Scouts’ confidential files. Some were filled with letters or handwritten notes describing how leaders who molested children had slipped through the cracks.

“What happened to the checks and balances? With the new registration, this wasn’t supposed to happen,” a Scout official scribbled in a handwritten note attached to a 1990 newspaper story about a Pennsylvania Scout leader arrested for molesting a teenage Scout. The man had been convicted 15 years earlier in Massachusetts for sexually abusing a boy in a police Explorers troop.

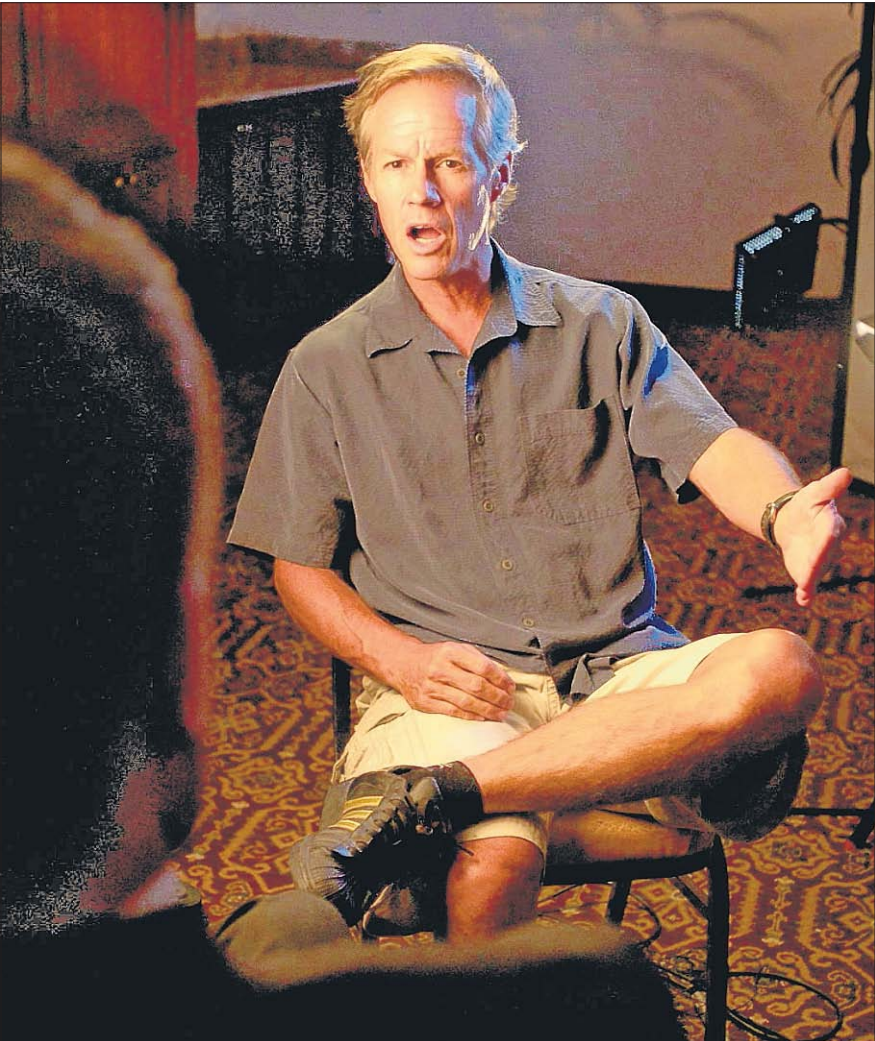

Not all the files illustrate a system breakdown. Some Scout officials acted quickly once they learned a leader had been arrested for child molestation. And in more than a quarter of the cases in which a youth or parent notified Scout officials about an allegation of sexual misconduct, the Scouts contacted authorities.

Boy Scouts National president Wayne Perry said the Boy Scouts continue to keep files as part of a “multilayered approach” to child protection, which includes mandatory reporting of suspected child abuse to authorities.

Veronica Akins holds a composite photo of her son Chance, who was molested by Scoutmaster Melvin Christopher Estes in the late 1980s. It sent the boy into a downward spiral, she said. Akins sued the Boy Scouts of America, taking her case all the way to the Texas Supreme Court.

EMMANUEL TAMBAKAKIS/SCRIPPS

Clay Evans was 13 when the scoutmaster of his Boulder, Colo., troop tried to molest him, he said. Evans said the local Scout committee didn’t take his complaint seriously. The scoutmaster, Floyd David Slusher, later was convicted of molesting several other Scouts.

But Scout files also expose serious communication failures, lack of due diligence and even intentional decisions to protect one of their own — or give him a break — rather than bar him from Scouting.

That’s what makes Clay Evans furious, even today.

Evans was a 13-year-old Scout in Boulder, Colo., when scoutmaster Floyd David Slusher allegedly tried to molest him in 1975. Evans said Slusher, who was in his early 20s, pulled him and a younger Scout into a station wagon’s back seat during a campout. He told them he was a bisexual who would teach them about masturbation and that they would start with hugging and kissing and then “move on to other things.”

Evans said he and the other boy declined and scrambled out of the car.

“Dave came to me later and said in a panic, ‘I want to hypnotize you right now so you’ll forget what happened,’” Evans recalled in an interview. “That scared me even more.”

Later that summer Evans told his father, and they reported the incident to troop committee members. But he said they suggested he might have misunderstood or exaggerated. They took no action. Nobody contacted the police.

Another Scout made a similar allegation against Slusher, also in 1975; troop officials confronted the scoutmaster, but felt there was insufficient evidence. Slusher was arrested in 1977 for molesting several Scouts. He was convicted of sexual assault on a minor and sentenced to “one day to life.” Paroled in 1984, he was arrested again in 1989 and charged with three counts of sexual exploitation of children. He was convicted and sentenced to 50 years in prison.

The files reveal Slusher had been dismissed as a Scout camp staffer in Germany in 1972 for sexually abusing a youth. U.S. Scouting officials put him on probation and let him continue in Scouting.

Evans, now a 50-year-old marketing manager and writer in Niwot, Colo., said he’s still angry that Scout officials ignored his complaint.

“It was a double violation of a kid’s trust,” Evans said. “A person in a position of authority violates a kid’s trust. Then the kid turns around and goes to the people who were supposed to protect him, and they do nothing. When I later found out that I was not the only one who tried to do the right thing and was dismissed, that just blew my mind.”

And it wasn’t just Scout victims whose lives were affected. Sometimes, whole families were devastated.

Veronica Akins, of Bishop Hills, Texas, said that’s what happened when her 13-year-old son was molested by Scout leader Melvin Christopher Estes in the late 1980s. Estes tried to fondle him in the bathroom of the church where the troop met, according to the victim’s deposition. Another time, Estes invited him into his bedroom to look at pornographic magazines. He started massaging the boy and tried to take off his pants.

Estes was convicted in 1989 of three counts of aggravated sexual assault and one count of indecency with a child. One of the four victims was Akins’ son, Chance Curtis. Estes was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Akins sued the Boy Scouts of America and the local council, claiming they were negligent in allowing Estes to remain a Scout leader. She alleged that they knew he’d been accused of molestation previously, but ignored it and gave him his own troop.

The Boy Scouts argued that Estes was quickly suspended after local officials learned of molestation allegations. The Scouts maintained that while they chartered community-based organizations that sponsored troops, they didn’t supervise them or choose Scout leaders.

The mother of four appealed her case all the way to the Texas Supreme Court. It ruled in 1996 that the national organization could not be held responsible, but that the local council — which recommended Estes for the scoutmaster’s job — could. Akins later agreed to an undisclosed settlement.

Akins said her son, now 37, has never been the same.

“He’s been in and out of trouble ever since this mess went on. We took him to several child psychologists,” she said. “He’d always been such a good boy.”

Curtis eventually dropped out of high school and became an alcoholic, drug addict and criminal, his mother said. He’s serving time in federal prison for a firearms charge.

Akins, 53, who works in the kitchen of a Christian academy and serves as a local alderman, said her son’s molestation and her battle with the Scouts led her to “trust basically no one anymore” and scarred her family.

“It tore our family up,” she said. “The kids could feel the stress and tension between my husband and I. You feel this anger, but you don’t know who to be angry at. It’s very destructive to families.”

Many of the confidential files share similar threads about how Scout leaders took advantage of their prey: plying boys with liquor, showing them pornography, performing “massages,” sharing tents or sleeping bags on camping trips.

Jerry Lee Parrish’s first run-in with the Scouts was in 1976, when a boy came home after spending time with the North Carolina scoutmaster, and his mother noticed something oily in his hair. The boy told his father that Parrish had taken nude photos of him, put oil on him and touched him, according to the files. The father put a loaded shotgun in his car and tried to find Parrish. A former district executive wrote that the mother of another Scout disclosed she had once caught Parrish touching her son inappropriately.

Local Scout officials “filed some forms” about Parrish that fall with the national office, the district executive collected about 15 years later. “We received a reply that we could not ‘black flag’ Jerry’s name at the registration office for reasons that I can’t recall today,” he wrote.

Parrish moved elsewhere. In the early 1980s, he joined a troop in Pittsboro, N.C. In 1990, Parrish, then a 43-year-old systems analyst at North Carolina State University, was arrested for molesting two Scouts. He allegedly told his victims that he was going to hypnotize them — then he would perform oral sex on them.

He pleaded guilty to four counts of taking indecent liberties with a child and was sentenced to 20 years, with all but six months suspended.

In 1998, Parrish was arrested again, this time in Florida, after flying there for what he hoped would be a sexual tryst with a 12-year-old boy he met on an Internet chat site. The “boy” turned out to be an undercover cop. Parrish faced federal charges because of his interstate travel and Internet use; he was convicted of sexual exploitation and enticement of a minor. He was sentenced to 18 years.

The Parrish case exposes how the rules meant to protect Scouts were sometimes ignored or violated. Local Scout leaders would notify national staffers of a problem, but the alleged molester wouldn’t be barred from Scouting. In other cases, local Scout officials would fail to report a leader accused of misconduct or would take months — or even years — to alert the national office.

Anna Salter, a psychologist in Madison, Wis., who has written several books about sex offenders, cautions that even today, strict child protection rules aren’t enough.

“Even when you have the best policies, you have individuals who don’t follow those policies,” said Salter, a consultant to the Wisconsin Department of Corrections. Sex offenders are good at fooling people, and organizations such as the Boy Scouts or their church-related sponsors sometimes would rather keep quiet than risk a scandal, she added.

“While policies get steadily better, we still have kids being abused because the dynamics haven’t changed.”

Blind tennis players keeping their ears on the ball

FREMONT, Calif. — Learning how to play tennis is hard enough. Now try it when you can't see.

That's what students are doing at the California School for the Blind. They're learning a form of tennis adapted for the visually impaired — and expanding the boundaries of what the blind can do.

The state-supported campus in Fremont is one of three American schools for the blind that recently began teaching adapted tennis, which was invented in Japan in the 1980s. A nonprofit group called Tennis Serves is working to promote the sport throughout the U.S.

"I didn't know someone with no vision could play tennis until I came to this school," said a 16-year-old student from Modesto named Jonathan. The school declined to provide his last name, citing a state law that protects the privacy of students with disabilities.

Austin Benavidez, who is blind, returns a volley using an oversized ball filled with ball bearings at the California School for the Blind in Fremont. Students at the school are learning to play tennis and expanding the boundaries of what the blind can do.

Blind tennis features a smaller court, lower net and junior tennis rackets with bigger heads and shorter handles. String is taped to the floor so players can feel the boundaries with their feet.

Players use a foam ball filled with metal beads that rattle on impact, allowing them to locate the ball when it hits the ground or racket. Once served, they have to return the ball before it bounces three times.

"The most difficult thing to teach is timing their stroke," said Sejal Vallabh, the 17-year-old founder of Tennis Serves.

"Being able to listen to the ball, locate it using their sense of hearing and swing at the precise moment the ball goes by is really difficult to teach."

While experienced players can keep the ball in bounds and stage extended rallies, just hitting the ball over the net can be a challenge for beginners.

During a recent visit to the California School for the Blind, students mostly swatted balls into the ground, the net and toward the ceiling and walls. Few balls were returned, but teachers say some are developing that capability.

Blind tennis was created in 1984 by Miyoshi Takei, a blind Japanese high school student who designed the adapted ball and helped the sport gain popularity in Japan and other Asian countries. He dominated blind tennis competitions until he was killed in a train accident last year at age 42.

The California School for the Blind, which has about 90 students ages 5 to 22, offers many adapted sports activities and sports, including bowling, boating, swimming, hiking, ice-skating and goal-ball.

Tennis is one of the most difficult sports for the visually impaired, but it brings unique rewards, teachers say.

"When it comes to being able to play a sport which is commonly only played by people with good vision, it's a big self-esteem boost," said John Healy, a dorm counselor who teaches adapted tennis.

CITY from 1A

The candidates were posed the following question: Under what circumstances would you support an increase in city revenues?

MILLS

I believe the citizens of Henderson demand the core city services that we provide daily. These services are performed by city personnel. These personnel costs make up about 85 percent of our total budget annually. At this moment, personnel costs outpace real property growth. This leaves us with a decision to cut services or ask for a small revenue increase in most years.

However, our conservative city management has allowed us to place a tax rate for next year that will generate the same revenue as this past year. I pledge to remain diligent in my pursuit to keep taxes low in Henderson.

HANCOCK

Currently, I do not think this is the time for the city to be raising revenues in the form of higher taxes and/or utility rates. At this time, the only way I could support any such measure is if it was to ensure the city and its residents that they would continue to receive the day to day services that they expect, at or above the current level.

PRUITT

For the last four years of my terms, I have voted twice to increase revenue and twice not to increase revenue. I believe that each budget year has its own circumstances that will dictate whether one should vote to raise revenue or not; but when the city saves over $818,000 dollars by shifting the health care burden onto the backs of our loyal and dedicated city workers, I strongly believe this is the type of circumstance that strongly influenced me NOT to raise taxes on the citizens of Henderson. An example of the time that I did vote to raise city revenues was due to the ice storm event when our city was inadequately prepared to provide basic needs for the citizens of Henderson so by voting to increase revenue allowed the city to provide cots for those in need of shelter, generators and other basic survival necessities to successfully sustain the ice storm or any other national disaster that may come.

JOHNSTON

I support increasing city revenues through broadening the tax base. Broadening the base means generating greater revenue through the construction of new homes and buildings, new business being drawn to Henderson increasing employment, and also increasing home values.

The city of Henderson has the highest property tax rates in the top eight cities in Kentucky by almost double, excluding the Louisville and Lexington areas, which have combined city and county taxes. To compete with cities like Owensboro, we need to look at revising our tax code to bring our property taxes down which would encourage job growth and lessen the burden for property owners, seniors, and those on fixed incomes.

HITE

I would not support any increase unless, and until, all efforts to cut expenses while still delivering needed services have been exhausted.

TAYLOR

When the ability to maintain city facilities, equipment, and vehicle fleet is jeopardized, because of a lack of financial resources, I would be in favor of an increase in city revenues. Henderson of the city's operations.

As the city of Henderson has limited avenues in order to raise funds (governed by state statutes) the need to increase revenue would have to be limited to only a very few instances.

One reason would be if it was necessary to have the revenue to meet any mandated expenses associated with federal or state actions. Another instance would be, should during the budgeting process (which I consider one of the most important, if not the most important function of the commission), the commission finds that an increase in one of its taxing options is necessary to maintain basic services to its taxpayers.

The final option that I can think of, would be if there is a catastrophic event or situation that created a need for an increase to provide basic services to the community.

FARMER

City revenue is derived from two sources: taxes and user fees. The costs of providing utility services and solid waste pickup and disposal to the citizens are for the most part paid by the collection of user fees.

However, most all other services are paid from funds available from the collection of taxes. The cost to provide police protection, fire protection, maintenance of city roadways and sidewalks, and city parks are paid from revenue from some form of taxation.

Budget increases in recent years have come from cost increases in most spending categories, with the cost of employee benefits increasing at a disproportionately higher rate than other costs. If we as a community expect city services to continue as we have become accustomed to expect, then revenue must be enhanced periodically to keep up with the rising cost of providing services.

I favor the practice of small routine revenue increases to be able to maintain the level of services the people of Henderson deserve and have come to expect.

Sandy made landfall at 8 p.m. near Atlantic City, which was already mostly under water and saw a piece of its world-famous Boardwalk washed away earlier in the day.

Authorities reported a record surge more than 13 feet high at the Battery at the southern tip of Manhattan, from the storm and high tide combined.

In an attempt to lessen damage from saltwater to the subway system and the underground electrical network that underlies the city's financial district, New York City's main utility cut power to about 6,500 customers in lower Manhattan. But a far wider swath was hit with blackouts caused by flooding and transformer explosions.

The subway system was shut down Sunday night, and the stock markets never opened at all Monday. They are likely to be closed Tuesday as well.

President Barack Obama and Republican challenger Mitt Romney canceled their campaign appearances at the very height of the race, with just over a week to go before Election Day. The president pledged the government's help and made a direct plea from the White House to those in the storm's path.

"When they tell you to evacuate, you need to evacuate," he said. "Don't delay, don't pause, don't question the instructions that are being given, because this is a powerful storm."

Sandy, which killed 69 people in the Caribbean before making its way up the Atlantic, began to hook left at midday toward the New Jersey coast.

The storm lost its status as hurricane because it no longer had a warm core center nor the convection — the upward air movement in the eye — that traditional hurricanes have, but it was still as dangerous as it was when it was considered a hurricane, according to National Hurricane Center spokesman Dennis Feltgen.

While the hurricane's 90 mph winds registered as only a Category 1 on a scale of five, it packed "astoundingly low" barometric pressure, giving it terrific energy to push water inland, said Kerry Emanuel, a professor of meteorology at MIT. And the New York metropolitan area apparently got the worst of it, because it was situated on the dangerous northeastern wall of the

Joker faces uncertain future at UK

■ As losses pile up, players support embattled coach

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Kentucky coach Joker Phillips has tried to maintain a sense of humor during what has been a difficult season and mounting questions about his job status.

“I was coming over here today, and I got in the car, and my seat was hot,” he said. “And I looked up, and I had hit the seat warmer.”

Questions regarding Phillips’ future and Kentucky’s struggles are no laughing matter, though.

The Wildcats (1-8, 0-6 Southeastern Conference) lost their seventh straight game Saturday at Missouri, ensuring a third consecutive losing season and putting them on pace for their worst finish since going 2-9 in 2004.

Injuries have forced Phillips to play 26 freshmen against one of the nation’s toughest schedules. That hasn’t stopped Wildcats fans from expressing their frustration: Calling for his dismissal on radio talk shows and not showing up for games — attendance has fallen off at 67,942-seat Commonwealth Stadium.

Players say they still support Phillips and will try to finish the season with three wins to help the embattled coach.

“He’s still here, he’s still our coach, we’re still playing for him and I’m going to play hard for him,” junior right tackle Kevin Mitchell said.

“We don’t actually say anything to him (about his situation), but we come out and we practice hard. We’re keeping it going, we just continue as a team. We’re all pushing each other hard. Practicing hard shows him that we still care, that we still believe and that we’re not giving up.”

Phillips, 12-22 and in his third season at Kentucky, is one of several SEC coaches facing uncertain futures — joining Auburn’s Gene Chizik, Tennessee’s Derek Dooley and Arkansas’ John L. Smith.

But Phillips has remained upbeat through the turmoil, saying that he’s been too busy focusing on his team to pay attention to what has been or said about him.

When asked again if he has talked to Kentucky athletics director Mitch Barnhart about his status, Phillips came back with his standard response that the two friends have talked without being specific.

It’s “just small talk,” Phillips said. “Talking like friends do weekly.”

Kentucky spokesman Tony Neely declined an interview request with Barnhart about Phillips, saying via email, “As was stated before the season, and as we do with each program, an evaluation will be done at the end of the season.”

As for Wildcats fans, they’ve had plenty to say on sports talk shows.

“Most fans feel there needs to be a change, and they’ve felt that way for some time,” said Larry Glover, who hosts a nightly radio show heard here and in Louisville.

“I think the knock on Joker is that Kentucky was relatively healthy and then they lost to Western Kentucky (32-31 in overtime). Had they beaten Western, I think he’d have a more credible case about the injuries and youth.”

That game marked a turning point for Kentucky in other ways. Sophomore quarterback Maxwell Smith, who started strong and was expected to lead the Wildcats’ offense, suffered a shoulder injury that sidelined him for a 38-0 loss at Florida.

Smith lasted just two plays in his return against South Carolina, tearing an ankle ligament that has effectively ended his season. That thrust true freshmen Jalen Whitlow and Patrick Towles into action, with Whitlow playing most of the past three games after Towles sustained a high ankle sprain against Mississippi State.

Most of Kentucky’s youngsters have been seen on defense, something the Wildcats believe will pay off down the road. In the meantime, opponents have exploited their inexperience particularly on the road.

The Wildcats are coming off a 33-10 loss at Missouri, which followed a storm-shortened 49-7 rout at Arkansas and the one at Florida.

They’ve been more competitive at Commonwealth Stadium, playing Georgia close two weeks ago and leading South Carolina at halftime last month before the Gamecocks rallied in the second half.

Nonetheless, attendance has fallen to an average of 51,255 through five games after averaging 60,007 for seven dates last season.

“You see the loss of confidence reflected in the attendance figures this year,” said Kentucky Sports Radio host Matt Jones, whose show is heard on 18 statewide affiliates. “This is probably the least interest I’ve seen in a UK football team in the seven, eight years I’ve been covering them. There’s never been a team that people cared less about than this one.”

Murray State guard Isaiah Canaan shoots a free throw during an NCAA tournament game against Colorado State in Louisville. Canaan made The Associated Press’ pre-season All-America team.

MSU’s Canaan is preseason All-American

The biggest man on The Associated Press’ pre-season All-America team got the most votes.

Seven-foot sophomore center Cody Zeller, the main reason Indiana is the preseason No. 1 for the first time in 33 years, was one vote shy of being a unanimous selection for the pre-season All-America team.

Zeller, who averaged 15.6 points and 6.6 rebounds while shooting 62.3 percent from the field, received 64 votes from the national media panel which selects the weekly Top 25.

Also on the team announced Monday were junior forwards Doug McDermott of Creighton and Deshaun Thomas of Ohio State and three guards — seniors Isaiah Canaan of Murray State and C.J. McCollum of Lehigh and sophomore Trey Burke of Michigan.

McDermott was named on 62 ballots, while Canaan was on 43 and Thomas 26. McCollum and Burke tied for the fifth spot with 16 votes each.

Canaan earned second-team All-America honors last season when he led Murray State to a 23-game winning streak to start the season, top 10 ranking, the third round of the NCAA tournament and a 31-2 record. A lot of Racers fans waited breathlessly for Canaan to announce he would skip the NBA draft and return for his senior season Canaan averaged 19.0 points, 3.5 rebounds and 3.6 assists per game while shooting 45.6 percent from 3-point range.

“Having him back is great, and he’s a tremendous kid,” Murray State coach Steve Prohm said. “He will go down as if not the best player, one of the best players, ever to play at Murray State. Anytime you have an elite guard as a coach that makes you feel really good.”

Champion Giants followed familiar formula

■ Mostly new roster helped secure second title in three years

By Janie McCauley
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The Giants’ championship formula is a familiar one, just with new faces all over the diamond two years later: stellar starting pitching backed by a shut-down bullpen, a late-season surge and a manager making all the right moves.

San Francisco captured its second World Series title in three seasons with a stunning sweep of the Tigers, and only catcher Buster Posey was in the lineup for the Game 5 clincher in 2010 at Texas and also the finale at Comerica Park in 2012.

“We’re just happy right now,” Posey said. “It’s an unbelievable feeling.”

Two of the four games against Detroit were started and won by a pair of pitchers not even on the World Series roster in 2010, and in Ryan Vogelsong’s case he wasn’t even in the majors back then.

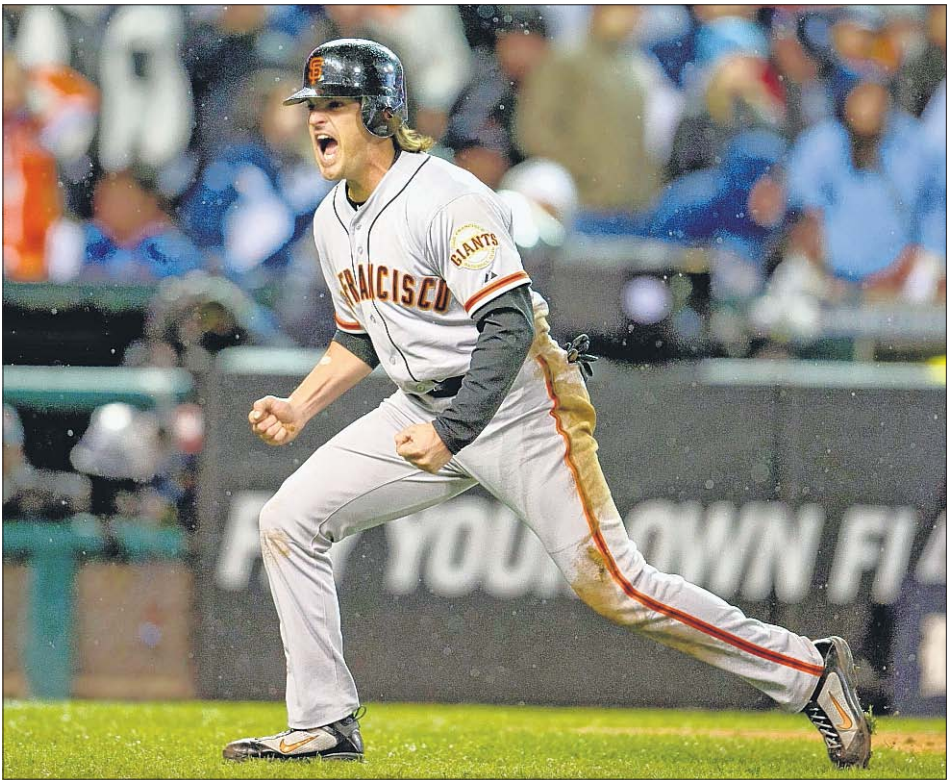

The only regular still around from that team is Posey, and the catcher had to rebound from devastating ankle and leg injuries sustained in a home-plate collision in late May 2011 to put together an MVP-caliber season and become the NL batting champ. He played far more than anybody envisioned his body would allow.

This time, a couple of bench warmers from that last October run shined for San Francisco — MVP Pablo Sandoval and Game 1 winner Barry Zito. The lefty Zito was left off the postseason roster for all three rounds in 2010.

“Just as a player, certainly you want to play on a team that wins the World Series. And to go out there and contribute, there’s nothing like that,” Zito said. “We were very adamant that we have to step on their throats. We saw what they did to New York.”

Marco Scutaro and Hunter Pence were this year’s midseason additions, with Scutaro following up Cody Ross in 2010 to earn NL championship series MVP honors. While Scutaro produced the timely hits, including a go-ahead single with two outs in the 10th inning of Sunday’s 4-3 win, Pence did plenty and became the motivational speaker of this group. He reminded his teammates to keep the focus even when they jumped out to a surprising 3-0 Series lead against the Tigers.

These Giants showed they could rally back — again and again — and also thrive when playing out in front.

They fell behind 2-0 to the Cincinnati Reds in the division series, then became the first team in major league history to rally back in a five-game series by winning three straight road games. They did it again against the defending champion St. Louis Cardinals.

Six victories in six elimination games.

“The thing that made this team so special is just playing as a team, caring for each other,” Pence said. “We had our backs against the wall and we knew it wasn’t going to be easy. It’s not supposed to be. That was one of our mottos, and we went out there to enjoy every minute of it and it was hard-earned.”

Lady Cols battled ‘Yankees’; Henderson’s soccer foe was classic underdog

There’s a legend about the 1927 Yankees winning the World Series before it even began. Their opponents lost heart while watching them murder the ball in batting practice.

Something similar happened Friday at the state volleyball tournament in Louisville when the Assumption Rockets practiced spiking. Whether the Henderson County Lady Colonels paid close attention is unclear but anybody who watched that session knew they didn’t have a chance.

Quick hitters at the front of the net, high-arching passes to the outside, no-look backward sets all were met with powerful swings, loud smacking sounds and thuds of ball on floor. It went on and on and on. These girls just didn’t miss, and neither did the setter.

Of course there’s a lot more to volleyball than hitting drills, with no defenders in the way. But the results were similar when Lady Colonels stood on the other side of the net, as Assumption cruised to a 25-4, 25-8, 25-7 triumph. The Rockets went on to win their third straight state championship, advancing to the title game with a couple more easy wins and then edging Louisville Mercy in five games.

Ranked third in the entire nation, Assumption lost twice this season — both times to top-ranked Torey Pines of Southern California. Since then, a new No. 1 has emerged from Nebraska and Assumption had the honor of beating that squad earlier in the year.

If it’s true that playing good competition makes a team better, then the Lady Colonels are due for a quantum leap next season.

Junior Alisha McBride proved she could compete with those 6-foot-3 whoppers across the net. The 6-foot middle hitter drilled several kills and blocked a few spikes on defense. Fellow junior Katelyn McMillan returned lots of difficult serves and went low to dig out some hard spikes.

All over the court, Lady Colonels faced huge challenges from elite opponents. Coach Mary Howard believes the trial by fire can pay dividends in the long run, so she made sure the entire roster received time in the skillet.

“Everybody got a little bit of action, at least,” she said. “That’s good for the future of our team.”

For the time being, however, the Lady Colonels should be perfectly content to live in the present and rest on the laurels of a record-setting season. They dethroned Caldwell County as Second Region queens, posted the most wins (34) in school history and took a place among the state’s best.

What’s more, they helped the squad’s lone senior (Shelby O’Nan) achieve her most precious goal. She wanted to go to state before her high school career ended.

“It was very important,” O’Nan said. “I wanted to be here at least one time.”

She had a moment of glory too, ripping a spike that whistled toward the back row and dropped untouched for the kill.

Also shining in the spotlight were the Henderson County fans. Led by a loud group of boys soccer players, they energetically supported their girls. The Colonels dropped by on their way to Lexington for Saturday’s state soccer tournament. When the contest was delayed by a power drain that dimmed the lights, they entertained with chants of “Go Hendo, go Hendo, go,” accompanied by frenetic choreography that resembled slam dancing.

After the match ended they saluted the departing girls with applause and the Colonel Fight Song, with other fans joining in. Even Assumption’s coach was impressed by the enthusiasm. So it goes without saying that Howard was too.

“That was extremely great to see that and we’re proud of our fans,” she said.

Smiling and posing for pictures after their 3-0 loss to Henderson County on Saturday, most Pikeville Panthers seemed happy to just be at the state soccer tournament. That’s usually the kind of attitude to avoid — the kind that gets you beat. But in this case, their joy was justified.

The little school from southeastern hill country had never won a soccer regional before, much less a Sweet 16 game. Yet there it was, bringing a 14-3-1 record to the Elite Eight in Lexington. Regardless of what happened next, these guys were winners.

The Colonels dominated everywhere but on the scoreboard. They put 21 shots on frame and sent several others whistling high or wide. Pikeville had just one shot on goal. Henderson County also enjoyed a 13-1 advantage in corner kicks and proved itself superior in the passing game, as well. It could’ve, and maybe should’ve, been a blowout but it’s fit-

SPORTS

Has Big Blue Nation bought into Calipari's one-and-done plan?

Has Big Blue Nation completely bought into John Calipari's show-me-the-money brand of college basketball?

Yes, according to a radio voice in Henderson. Winning championships, making one-year college players into NBA millionaires is more important to Big Blue fans than college, Michael Vick said on WSON Radio in Henderson last week.

Vick may well be right. Considering cash involved and education costs ($18,000-a-year tuition at a public university, a CBS survey says), the one-and-done issue seems to rise to level of interest and importance for a Bluegrass Poll Survey of Big Blue Nation. Doesn't it?

Do 21st century people views and priorities mean Kentucky Wildcat basketball fans believe show-me-the-money millions for 18-year-old ball players is more important than 2-3-4 years on a college campus?

While we wait for the Bluegrass Poll people to take a slice of public opinion, what do you think? I would like to hear from you at sprtsinky@aol.com

Meanwhile, despite sports being awash in millions of dollars, count me a traditionalist still inclined to embrace the student-athlete idea instead of "player."

UK'S EMPTY UNIFORMS

Joker Phillips. Good chap with the right stuff, mostly. You know the list: Principled, values education, grow big kids into bigger men, embraces self discipline, walks-the-walk — how to handle life's really hard tackles not only when, but especially when some are cheap shots.

Sound noble? Isn't enough. At Columbia, Mo., last week, Kentucky's white-on-blue uniforms were empty. One might conclude the team quit on its coach, but in fact, too many players simply left their game at the motel.

A stark reality that leaves fans who pay a rights fee to buy a ticket into Commonwealth Stadium, in a foul mood with hot attitude: "Hey Mitch, take your rights fee and ticket and stick 'em."

So, Kentucky fans have come to November and all have seen this movie before. The Kentucky Wildcats have fallen back to the bunker, coaches retreated to spin-good-stuff from the edges (white noise) and make details (excuses) sound technical and like progress.

Fan solution? Fire the damned coach!

Bottom line: Another show or two like the one in Columbia and pink slips won't need sending.

FOOTBALL JOY

This week Charlie Strong's Louisville Cardinals (8-0) occupy 10th spot in BCS standings and stand on the sunnyside of major bowl contention.

Talk around U of L has turned to: run-the-table, and "can we believe our ball coach who says he's staying?"

Meanwhile in Bowling Green, Western Kentucky (6-2) is bowl eligible (second year in a row) and has another high stakes opportunity to show off for bowl selection people. Rival Middle Tennessee (5-3) is in town Thursday night trying to make itself bowl eligible.

RICHARDSON REVISIONISM

Texas A&M and Missouri joining the SEC, became occasion for Nolan Richardson to indulge in a bit of revisionist history last week. At SEC basketball media meeting the ex-Arkansas coach weighed in on league expansion and showed he still has the chip on his shoulder.

Richardson declared the SEC became big time big time in 1991, when his Arkansas team arrived from the Southwest Conference.

"From that point when others saw Arkansas can do that, (shoot) we can too," he told the media. "That's when the whole league began to change. We changed the whole energy of the league. I know that for a fact."

Richardson's claim of single-handedly making the SEC more than Kentucky & nine clowns, amounts to self-important, self-serving poppycock.

In fact, Richardson was a high school kid in El Paso when Ray Mears was antagonizing the SEC into getting serious about basketball (1963-77). Mears was first to press the league from UK and nine clowns to where it is today. Big Orange Country sport coats, orange basketballs, and the unicycle gave the league flare, made Baron Adolph Rupp grumble and pressed officials at other SEC schools to realize, "shoot, we can do that too! Besides, there's money in it."

Then, Pete Maravich, 1968 to 1970.

Nolan Richardson's Arkansas team was far better than the coach's revisionist history.

more goalie Luke Wheat, whose 17 saves kept the game competitive. With the defense in consistent "bend but don't break" mode, Pikeville periodically launched counter attacks and the guys up front looked pretty formidable. All over the field, there was no lack of effort.

"They hustled very hard," said Colonels sophomore Nick Gregory. "They were a big team and they did good in the air."

You've got to score to win, though, and the Panthers rarely came close. They became Henderson County's 13th shutout victim — a number that ties the single-season school record, set last year. With their Final Four appearance two days away, the Colonels hope to keep pitching shutouts and become more proficient at finishing scoring opportunities.

On Saturday they went 36 minutes before finally putting one in the net.

"We had to stay calm," said midfielder Miguel Velazquez, who had a goal and an assist. "Once we found the net, we found it frequently. We've just got to be more consistent."

Saturday's game marked the long-awaited return of quick-footed Demetrius Carter, who returned from a leg injury that sidelined him for more than six weeks. Coming off the bench, he gradually shook off the rust and contributed to the win.

"By the end of the game he looked pretty good," Pryor said. "That's gonna help us. He just makes us a lot deeper than we were."

Announcing a Breakthrough Discovery at a Famous Massachusetts University!

Does Low Testosterone Mean A Shorter Lifespan?

Does it also cause excess body fat, problem sleeping, lack of energy, high cholesterol, high blood pressure, your heart disease, strokes, memory loss, and of course, an empty sex life!

Dr. Philippe Moser

Recently, doctors at a famous Massachusetts university dropped a "medical bombshell" that's guaranteed to change the life and lifespan of every man over the age of 30. Revealed in this life-changing report is both good news and bad about one of the most important medical discoveries of the past 100 years!

FIRST THE BAD NEWS:

After over 30 years of testing — comes conclusive proof that 99% of all men over 30 years of age suffer from lowered levels of testosterone and exposure to all of the "NEGATIVE NINE" consequences you see listed above.

Which simply means that once you reach the age of 30, your body's supply of testosterone grows lower... youthful energy and zest for life gradually disappear... and in their place come all the aches, pains and heartbreaks of a rapidly aging body. Not a very encouraging future. But wait — don't despair, because:

NOW COMES THE GOOD NEWS:

Medical School Researchers found a new testosterone-boosting ingredient from a tree in Malaysia — called Eurycoma Longifolia that studies show boost your testosterone reserves by up to 213% in men between the ages of 23 and 83 — and therefore fights off all these dreaded consequences of aging.

In Just 48 Hours You Start To Feel Like You Are A Whole Generation Younger!

Unlike the past, when the only remedy for low testosterone was weekly testosterone injections... NOW, with science's newly developed "miracle pill" — called LIBIDON PLUS — you can boost prime-of-life health, vigor and vitality to your body to fight off the ravaging effects of low testosterone — such as:

- Overweight and excess fat build up
- Clogged arteries
- Unhealthy blood pressure and increased risk to heart problems
- Sleep problems and morning wake-up fogginess
- Energy bankruptcy - lack of vim, vigor, and vitality throughout the day
- Memory loss and slowed reflex reaction
- Loss of ability to focus and concentrate for extended periods of time
- Diminished libido and weakened sexual performance

And that's only the beginning of the wondrous health and life-enhancing benefits that await you thanks to this major scientific discovery!

Imagine Staying In The Prime Of Life For So Long You First Start Middle Age When You Are 75 Years Old!

Even more significant, after extensive clinical tests doctors predict that with continued use, LIBIDON PLUS may extend your prime-of-life years plus your lifespan itself an additional 15 to 20 years! Literally enjoy a "second springtime" of prime of life years at 70, 80, 90, even 100 years of age — in better health, better condition and with more fired-up energy than your very own children!

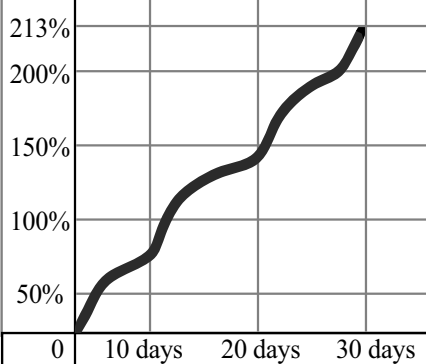

How New Wonder-Pill Fights Off The Effects Of The Aging Process

To understand the major role testosterone plays in your well-being, we have to roll back the calendar 30 years.

Starting in the 1980's doctors began to fully recognize how low testosterone affected your health, your quality of life and your very lifespan.

Dr. Moser Shows You How Vital Testosterone Is To Your Health, Life and Lifespan

So they began treating patients with testosterone injections... as many as 4 to 5 times a week — which even though they made a dramatic change in the lives of all men over 30, were extremely costly and very inconvenient.

Then in the late 1990's scientists developed testosterone pellets to implant beneath the skin every 2 weeks for daily, gradual release.

But patients complained they were even more costly than multiple injections and also were very painful when being implanted.

But now, at long last, from research scientists comes a completely natural way for every man over 30, to stimulate the production of your body's life-enhancing testosterone.

To once again rejuvenate your system with a prime-of-youth surge of testosterone you have not enjoyed since you were in your late teens or early 20's.

Your Body Is Protected With A "Suit Of Armor" Against Life-Shortening Conditions That Usually Occur With Aging!

Now do you realize why the problem of low testosterone and its solution has been written up in the "Journal Of The American Medical Association", "The New England Journal Of Medicine", the U.S. Government's "National Institute of Health" and countless reports from medical schools and universities across the country!

And why LIBIDON PLUS with Eurycoma Longifolia is so vital to the health, well-being and lifespan of every man from age 30 to age 80... that a full one-month BONUS bottle supply will be sent to all who try it within the next 15 days!

Halloween costumes at work? May be a scary idea

By Liz Freeman
Scripps Howard News Service

NAPLES, Fla. — One person’s humor can be another’s misery. Halloween parties in the workplace may seem innocent enough, but the fun can prompt concerns of harassment when costumes convey messages. “It’s great to have a party. It’s a morale booster,” said Deb Keary, vice president of the Society for Human Resources in Alexandria, Va. “But with Halloween, you have to be careful. Stay away from the political, stay away from the religious and dress appropriately. Remember, it’s still a workplace.” There’s movement among some companies to scale back on the Halloween celebrations, although her association hasn’t surveyed members to see if a trend is developing. “Some are cutting back,” Keary said. “It depends on the individual workplace.” Karen Sutherland, an employment and labor attorney in Seattle, has seen more inquiries from business owners in recent years about workplace Halloween parties. “But it’s usually after an issue arises,” she said, referring to inappropriate behavior and potential claims of harassment. A male worker pinches a female colleague to see what is part of a costume and what is not, or there’s a joke that is out of line and offends someone. After occurrences like that, Sutherland said, employers decide to set the tone and lay down some rules. “What you are seeing is some attempt to provide guidance,” Sutherland said. She suggests that employees be told to limit props when it comes to items such as guns or chains, limit masks because of safety concerns, and outright prohibit costumes that can be construed as offensive based on age, sex, religion, national origin or race when it reinforces stereotypes. Guidelines need to be clear to prohibit anything sexually suggestive. When it comes to costumes disrupting productivity, the solution is to limit them to a certain time of day. “Generally, employers deal with it by having costumes at a lunchtime party,” Sutherland said. The Naples Beach Hotel &

Golf Club allows employees to dress up in costumes and even has a parade in its main lobby at 2 p.m. for employees to show their costumes, said Patsy Carbone, the human resources director. She can’t recall anytime in the 17 years she’s been with the hotel that anyone has dressed inappropriately. She attributes that to respect that employees have for the hotel’s longtime owners, and the workplace culture. “We just ask our employees to dress tastefully,” Carbone said. “I think that says a lot to adults.”

Hurricane Sandy grounds flights, strands thousands

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hurricane Sandy grounded thousands of flights in the U.S. northeast Monday and up-ended travel plans across the globe, stranding passengers from Hong Kong to Europe. The massive storm threatens to bring a near halt to air travel for at least two days in a key region for both domestic and international flights. Major carriers such as American Airlines, United and Delta cancelled all flights into and out of three area airports in New York, the nation’s busiest airspace.

According to the flight-tracking service Flight-Aware, nearly 10,000 flights had been canceled for Monday and today, almost all related to the storm.

The cancellations have already surpassed those from last year’s damaging Hurricane Irene. They’re now on par with a major winter storm in early 2011. Back then, 14,000 flights were scrapped over four days.

Delays rippled across the U.S., affecting travelers in cities such as San Francisco to Chicago.

Disruptions spread to Europe and Asia, where airlines canceled or delayed flights to New York and Washington from cities that are major travel hubs including London, Paris, Tokyo and Hong Kong. About one-quarter of all U.S. flights travel in or out of New York airports each day. So cancellations here can dramatically impact travel in other cities. Businessman Alan Shrem was trying to return home to Boca Raton, Fla. His Monday morning Cathay Pacific flight from Hong Kong to New York’s

Kennedy airport was canceled. He learned he could be stuck in Hong Kong for nearly a week because the next available seat was Nov. 4. He was put on a waiting list for seats that could become available earlier. By early afternoon, the storm had strengthened to 90 mph and had already knocked out power to tens of thousands of people. Sandy was 110 miles southeast of Atlantic City, N.J., and had turned toward the west, as forecasters feared. Sandy is on track to collide with a wintry storm moving in from the west and cold air streaming down from the Arctic. Airports in the metropolitan New York City area are open, but air carriers are not operating. The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey said Monday that travelers shouldn’t even try to go to Kennedy, Newark Liberty, LaGuardia and Stewart airports. Angela Gittens, director general of the Airports Council International who was the aviation director at Miami International Airport Dade during several hurricanes from 2001 to 2004, said even if storm damage is minor it could be a week before operations are normal at major East Coast airports.

Consumer spending up in September

WASHINGTON — Americans increased their spending in September at twice the rate that their income grew, a sign of confidence in the economy. Still, consumers made up the difference by saving less for a third straight month, a troubling trend. The Commerce Department said Monday that consumer spending increased 0.8 percent in September from August. That followed a 0.5 percent gain in August and was the best showing since February. Personal income rose 0.4 percent, an improvement from a slight 0.1 percent gain in August and the best gain since March. However, after adjusting for inflation and taxes, income was flat in September. That followed a 0.3 percent decline in August. PayPal to cut 325 full-time jobs NEW YORK — PayPal is cutting 325 full-time jobs to streamline its business and speed up product development amid intense competition from plucky startups and established companies such as Google. The company also is ending jobs with about 120 independent contractors worldwide. The job cuts have been expected and were reported by The Associated Press earlier this month. Its parent company, San Jose, Calif.-based eBay Inc., said it expects to book a restructuring charge of about $15 million in the current quarter, related to the job cuts. UPS expecting busy holidays NEW YORK — UPS expects to deliver 527 million packages between Thanksgiving and Christmas this year, surpassing last year’s record high by 10 percent. The world’s largest package delivery company estimates 28 million of those will be delivered on Dec. 20 — projected to be the busiest day of the year. That’s nearly double what the Atlanta company moves on an average day. The busiest day of the year has moved close to Christmas because more Americans are ordering gifts online and using expedited shipping. UPS’ smaller rival FedEx expects to handle 280 million shipments between Thanksgiving and Christmas, up 13 percent from the same stretch last year.

What Is Common Sense Government?

Two years ago, when I first ran for City Commission, my campaign was based on “Common Sense City Government”. I have delivered on that campaign promise.

- From 2005 thru 2010, the city had taken over 3/4 of a million dollars from the reserve account to balance the annual budget.
- In the past two years, we have balanced our annual budget, AND returned over $571,000 to that reserve account!

THAT is what I call “Common Sense Government”

Advice

Spend time supporting daughter emotionally

Dear Amy: Our daughter is 45 years old. She has never been married or lived with a man. She has a conservative demeanor. One month ago, she met a divorced man her age. He has two adolescent daughters. They seem in an unreasonable haste to get married.

Our concerns are many. He is a laborer, and she is a gifted classical musician and has done well in her life. She owns her house free and clear. We worry about her having to bring up two girls of a broken home (the parents share custody).

We also worry about the difference in social standing between them (although we do respect any hardworking person). We advise her to look for a more compatible mate, but she will not listen.

What is your advice on this situation? What would be a reasonable time span for getting to know each other before deciding you want to get married?

— Worried Parents

Dear Worried: At 45 years old, your daughter is old enough to make up her own mind about the life she wants to live — and with whom she wants to live it. Love has no timetable, and sometimes the longer you wait to find love, the faster and more certainly it sweeps you up.

“Broken homes” are not always broken in the way you seem to think, and I give your daughter credit for being willing to take on the challenges of marriage and motherhood.

There is no real way to prepare for these challenges, other than to know your partner well. In this regard, your daughter probably needs more time, but when love hits, it can feel like a sure and instant “Yes!” A line from the great Nora Ephron about instant love resonates here: “At that moment, I knew. I knew the way you know about a good melon.”

Your judgments about your daughter’s situation are harsh; you would be wise to keep them to yourselves and instead spend your energy supporting her emotionally and hoping for her success.

Dear Amy: A recent letter in your column relayed concern about a grandmother who sent two birthday gifts to the same grandchild. As an active 89-year-old with an unreliable memory, I keep a birthday book, which includes the dates for all of my grandchildren, their spouses and my many great-grandchildren.

I sent my 18-year-old great-grandson a card and money via his mother, then three weeks later worried that I had forgotten him, so I got his new address and sent him another card and some money.

Here’s my message to him: Please enjoy the extra cash; I know you need it in college — just don’t spread the word around the family that grandma is losing it!

— Grace

Dear Grace: With many family members spread over generations, it is very easy to lose track. This doesn’t mean you are “losing it” — just that you are doubling-up on the love!

Horoscope

TODAY’S BIRTHDAY: (Oct. 30). The sun’s returning to the waters of your birth sign has a spiritually cleansing and rejuvenating effect. In November, you’ll focus on the part of your personal life that needs creative reconstruction. In December, you’ll lighten someone’s load and gain three times the generosity you give. January brings new commitments. Libra and Taurus people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 25, 1, 44 and 31.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). You’re willing to fight for what is yours, but are you willing to fight for what is not yet yours? This takes great faith that your projection of the future is good for all.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). With the full moon encouraging you to live out loud, you’ll spend extra time making sure you’re ready to look good, sound good and present yourself in the best possible light.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). You’ll be inspired to nourish your mind. The full moon brings intellectual encouragement to you, and you’ll find no better excuse to buy books, enroll in a class or attend a lecture.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). The fullness of your guiding luminary, the moon, will draw out your generosity. You’ll feel inspired to spend money and effort to help the environment and repay Mother Nature in some small way for the gifts she’s given you.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). The antics of others may cause the moral compass inside you to spin madly, searching for a set point. When, if ever, should you try to impose your moral standards on others? That will be the question of the day.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The full moon turns your sense of logic on its ear. You’ll figure out the answers to the more complex questions thrown your way, while simple questions may remain a mystery.

Save keyboard from spilled water mishap

Dear Readers: Someone in Heloise Central had a mishap, spilling water all over her desk and keyboard. Luckily, the keyboard was saved. So, if this happens to you, keep these Heloise Hints in mind:

- First, turn off the computer, unplug the keyboard and disconnect it. Turn the keyboard upside down on some paper towels and let as much of the liquid drain out as possible. This may take a few hours.
- Water and other non-sugary liquids sometimes can be removed from the keyboard by blowing air over it using a hair dryer. Move the dryer around, and don’t allow the keyboard to get too hot.

- Liquids like coffee, tea, alcoholic beverages and soda can damage keyboards beyond repair, because they can be sticky and may leave a residue behind. More than likely, this type of spill will result in the purchase of a new keyboard.
- If the spill is on a laptop, notebook, e-reader, etc., the device will need to be taken to a repair shop immediately.

God does not abandon us in life

Dear Dr. Graham: I’m in the hospital (broken hip), and the doctor says I can’t live on my own any more but must go into a nursing home. I can’t face it.

I’ve been independent all my life. My children live in other cities, and I can’t go live with them. Why is God doing this to me?

— Mrs. E. McD.

Dear Mrs. McD.: Losing our independence as we grow older is hard — and it’s especially hard if we’ve been used to doing almost anything we wanted to do. But no matter who we are or how self-reliant we’ve been, eventually we’ll lose our independence if we live long enough.

Do you remember Peter, who was one of Jesus’ closest disciples? Before he met Jesus, Peter was a fisherman on the Sea of Galilee — strong, independent, willing to take risks, used to running his own business. And that independent streak never completely left him, even as a disciple.

Often, for example, Peter was the first to speak out, and when Jesus was arrested Peter impetuously drew his sword and cut off the ear of the high priest’s servant (see John 18:10).

But one day, Jesus warned, Peter would grow old and lose his independence. He said, “When you are old you will stretch out your hands, and someone else will dress you and lead you” (John 21:18).

Don’t be angry at God because you’re facing problems; they are part of life, and God has not abandoned you.

Instead, be thankful for every day He gives you, and ask Him to help you adjust to your situation — and even be a blessing to others.

Most of all, fix your eyes on heaven. Life is brief — but eternity is forever. Put your life into Christ’s hands, and thank Him for the hope we have of heaven because of His death and resurrection for us.

Follow specific instructions when taking erectile dysfunction meds

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I am 70 years old and working as I did when I was 25.

I am having trouble finding the answer to erectile dysfunction. Is there a way other than the pill to restore virility? I have tried them.

— J.J.

Dear J.J.: By “the pill,” I take it you mean Viagra, Cialis or Levitra. They have a good record for restoring potency.

However, you have to take them by strictly observing the instructions that come with them. Viagra, for example, works best when taken on an empty stomach — no food for four hours. If you weren’t taking it like that, try again. Secondly, all three of these drugs have three dosages. If the lowest dose doesn’t work, a higher one might.

Before taking any ED (erectile dysfunction) medicine blindly, you, along with your doctor, have to make a search for the cause of the problem.

Clogging of arteries that deliver blood for an erection could be the cause.

Such obstruction indicates that other arteries suffer the same condition. For your general health, you need to know if the process is occurring in other blood vessels, like the ones to the heart.

Diabetes and high blood pressure are two other factors involved in ED. Have you been tested for them? Depression also leads to ED.

Has your level of testosterone been checked? The male hormone is very important in maintaining sexual function.

You might need a boost to the amount of testosterone you’re producing. You are 70 years old, and with age, testosterone production decreases.

Devices that don’t involve taking medicines are an approach that should be considered. A vacuum pump draws blood into the penis, and a constriction ring around the base of that organ keeps blood there.

Another device is an implant that pumps saline into the penis. You activate the pump by squeezing it. It’s implanted in the scrotum.

Alprostadil is a medicine inserted painlessly into the penis with an applicator. The name of this device is MUSE.

A talk with a urologist can give you detailed information on finding the cause and determining the best treatment for it.

Public lines up for new low-cost appliance that slashes heat bills

Amish craftsmen vow to keep up with rush for brand-new Hybrid-Thermic™ ‘Miracle Heater’ that uses about the same energy as a coffee maker per hour, so just plug it in and never be cold again

Everyone hates high heat bills. But we're all sick and tired of turning the thermostat down and freezing our buns off.

That's why Sears knew they had a home-run on their hands with the first-ever low-cost appliance with Hybrid-Thermic™ heat technology and Hi-Def Fireless Flame. And no other heater anywhere has it.

The brand-new portable Heat Surge EV-2 sips so little energy, you can run it for a full 12-hour day or night for just about a buck.

This modern marvel, hailed as the zone heating ‘Miracle Heater,’ caused such a frenzy at Sears stores, one shopper refused to leave until she got one. Since there were none in stock, store managers were forced to hand over the store's only floor model, against store policy.

So today, immediate action is being taken to give more people, more ways to get them.

Beginning at 8:30 a.m., today's readers are allowed to phone in or snag one online. Heat Surge even released this advertising announcement and a 2-Day Double Coupon which has been reprinted on this page for today's readers to use.

By using this coupon, everyone who calls is being rewarded with $227 off. That makes this remarkable new home appliance a real steal at just $299. Since this is a Double Coupon Deal, it not only gives you an extraordinary discount, but also entitles you to free shipping and handling, totaling $227 off. So now everyone has a fair shot at getting one.

“Folks are saving money everywhere by zone heating with the new Heat Surge EV-2,” said Dave O’Neil, the company’s analyst tracking the impact Heat Surge is having on consumer heat bills.

This all started when Sears wanted the world-famous ‘Amish Miracle Heater’ that everyone was asking for.

The shy but now famous Amish craftsman said Sears made the most sense. “I’d reckon they’re the oldest and most trusted in the country,” one of the Amish craftsmen known as Melvin said.

“It’s been saving folks money, big money. And we know it because we’re hearin’ about it,” he said.

“They know about our quality. No particle board, just real wood. Fully-assembled cabinets by our hands and we’re making them right here in the good ole USA,” Melvin said.

Director of Technology David Martin explained, “The Heat Surge Accent EV-2 is a revolutionary appliance that can easily roll from room to room. But we didn’t want it to look like some metal box that just sits there. So we turned to our Amish craftsmen and now each one is made to look like a sleek, slim fireplace that has no real flames.”

“The peaceful flicker of the Hi-Def ‘Fireless Flame’ is so beautiful, everyone thinks it’s real, but it’s totally safe to the touch. All you do is just plug it in,” Martin said.

People from Maine to Mississippi and even Florida and Arizona are flocking to get them because they are finally able to give their central heat a rest during the long, frigid winter ahead.

According to the avalanche of consumer reviews, people absolutely swear by them, repeatedly saying, “it saves money,” “looks beautiful,” and “keeps you warm head to toe, floor to ceiling.” And the word is getting out. That’s why people are clamoring to get them.

But Martin said right now the real problem is making sure the Amish craftsmen can keep up with the looming Christmas rush.

That’s why the Double Coupon expires in two days.

So for readers hoping to get the new Heat Surge for themselves and take care of gifts for others, there is good news.

You can use the 2-Day Double Coupon more than once. But there is a catch. You can only get away with it for the next two days from the date of today’s publication by calling the National Appliance Center at 1-800-618-8510.

Then, when it arrives, you’ll be rushing to turn down that thermostat. Just plug it in, watch your heat bills hit rock bottom, and never be cold again. ■

■ GOTTA HAVE ONE: People are flocking to Sears stores everywhere to get the brand-new Heat Surge EV-2. An eager crowd remained respectful as Jonas Miller stages a promotional delivery event. “I heard so much about the Amish Miracle Heater but couldn’t find where to get one,” an excited Mary Straughn said. That’s why a National Appliance Hotline has been set up for today’s readers who can’t rush out to get one. Readers who call the Hotline at 1-800-618-8510 will get free delivery with an extraordinary 2-Day Double Coupon that has been reprinted below.

■ SAFE: The beautiful L.E.D. Hi-Def Fireless Flame® on the new Heat Surge EV-2 is so stunning, everyone thinks it’s real, but it’s actually safe to the touch. It’s so safe, it’s where the kids will play & the pets will sleep.

■ BLANKET FREE COMFORT: “We just couldn’t take another winter of always being cold. And we also got one for the kids to help them with their heat bills,” Julia White said.

How It Works: You get 74° of bone-soothing room heat even when the home thermostat is turned down to 59° with the first-ever Heat Surge EV-2

■ MODERN MARVEL: The revolutionary Heat Surge Accent EV-2 micro-furnace fits in any room because it’s packed inside a small Amish-built cabinet that measures just 25” high, 18” wide, and 12” deep.

This is the revolutionary Heat Surge EV-2, the only appliance with Hybrid-Thermic™ heat technology. Hybrid-Thermic heat technology is an engineering genius so advanced, it actually uses a micro-furnace from the Coast of China and a thermal heat exchanger to perform its miracles. The thermal heat exchanger acts like the rays of the sun to heat you, the kids, the pets and everything else. The micro-furnace then heats all the surrounding air. Together, this Hybrid-Thermic heat technology warms both you and the air around you, taking care of all the cold spots. In fact, it actually produces bone-soothing heat to help you feel good.

This modern marvel uses L.E.D. flame technology and just a trickle of electricity and saves you money based on a U.S. average that says it uses only about 9¢ of electricity an hour on the standard setting, yet it produces up to an amazing 4,606 British Thermal Units (BTU’s) on the high setting. But here’s the big surprise. It’s not just a metal box that belongs in a basement. The Heat Surge EV-2 is a showpiece in any room. That’s because it has the ambiance of a real fireplace, but it has no real flames. Its Hi-Def Fireless Flame® technology makes it safe to the touch.

The portable Heat Surge EV-2 comes installed in a genuine Amish-built wood cabinet made in the heart-land of Ohio. They are hand-rubbed, stained, and varnished. When it arrives, all you do is just plug it in.

■ ZONE HEATING SLASHES HEAT BILLS: Notice how the home thermostat is turned down to 59°. The left shows the Heat Surge Hybrid-Thermic ‘Miracle Heater’ blanketing the whole-room with 74° of warmth.

A Consumer Best Buy

An avalanche of unsolicited consumer reviews gives the company the reason to boast an overwhelming Consumer ‘Best Buy’ on the HeatReport.com website. Consumers should be aware of the fakes out there. This Hybrid-Thermic ‘Miracle Heater’ can never be found at Wal-Mart®, not at Lowe’s®, not at Home Depot®, and none of the Club Stores. “Accept no imitations. If it does not have the Heat Surge name on it, it is not real Amish and it is not Hybrid-Thermic™. I repeat, if it does not have the Heat Surge name on it, you are getting ripped off,” said Heat Surge Chief Compliance Officer, Dennis James. The Heat Surge has earned the coveted Underwriters Laboratories certification and is protected by a limited full year replacement or money back warranty and 30-day Satisfaction Guarantee.

Hurricane claims famous ship off North Carolina

The Associated Press

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. — The final hours of the HMS Bounty were as dramatic as the Hollywood adventure films she starred in, with the crew abandoning ship in life rafts as their stately craft slowly went down in the immense waves churned up by Hurricane Sandy off the North Carolina coast.

By the time the first rescue helicopter arrived, all that was visible of the replica 18th-century sailing vessel was a strobe light atop the mighty ship's submerged masts. The roiling Atlantic Ocean had claimed the rest.

The Coast Guard rescued 14 crew members by helicopter Monday. Hours later, rescuers found one of the missing crew members, but she was unresponsive. And they were still searching for the captain.

"We pray there's no loss of life and that they rescue all of the crew," said Bill Foster, mayor of St. Petersburg, Fla., a frequent winter port for the ship and where it had been expected to arrive in November. "When a crew decides it's safer in an inflatable than it is on deck, then you know she's in peril."

The ship was originally built for the 1962 film "Mutiny on the Bounty" starring Marlon Brando, and it was featured in several other films over the years, including one of the "Pirates of the Caribbean" movies.

The vessel left Connecticut on Thursday with a crew of 11 men and five women, ranging in age from 20 to 63. Everyone aboard knew the journey could be treacherous.

"This will be a tough voyage for Bounty," read a posting on the ship's Facebook page that showed a map of its coordinates and satellite images of the storm.

The Bounty's Facebook page reads like a ship's log of her activities, with many photos of the majestic vessel plying deep blue waters and the crew working in the rigging or keeping watch on the wood-planked deck.

As Sandy's massive size became more apparent, a post on Saturday tried to soothe any worried supporters: "Rest assured that the Bounty is safe and in very capable hands. Bounty's current voyage is a calculated decision ... NOT AT ALL ... irresponsible or with a lack of foresight as some have suggested..."

Parker (top) and Aniston: Fans still prefer them with a few friends

It seems Jennifer Aniston and Sarah Jessica Parker are really trying to make the leap from small screen to big screen. Do you think either will become a top-rank film star?—C. Davis, Detroit, Mich.

It's too early to tell. Aniston, 37, and Parker, 41, have the pick of parts for actresses in their age range but have yet to prove they can open a film on their own. Both still seem more effective working as part of an ensemble than as leading ladies.

As a fan of CBS' NUMB3RS, I'm curious about David Krumholtz. Is he really a math genius?—Kathy Hess, Allentown, Pa.

Hardly. "As a kid, math was the bane of my existence," says Krumholtz, 27, who began his career as Judd Hirsch's son in the 1990s. —L. Collingsworth
